

Adult Migrant English Program

We can help you learn English

Why should I learn English?

English is Australia's national language.

People in Australia speak many languages, but to take part fully in Australian life you will need to speak and understand some English. Without English, you will find it difficult to get a job and become independent. English is also needed if you wish to become an Australian citizen.

What is the Adult Migrant English Program?

The program, also known as AMEP, provides basic tuition in the English language to help eligible adult migrants and refugees settle successfully in Australia.

The AMEP will teach you more than just English. You will also learn about Australian society, culture and customs. You will meet other new arrivals, who may have similar experiences and goals to yours, and you will probably make many new friends.

The AMEP is an Australian Government funded program.

Am I eligible for the program?

You may be eligible if you are a migrant or refugee settling in Australia and have been granted a permanent visa and you speak little or no English. Some migrants with provisional visas may also be eligible to join the program.

You need to register with one of the AMEP service providers within three months of arriving in Australia or gaining permanent residence. You should begin classes within one year.

You can study English with the AMEP for up to 510 hours or until you reach functional English, whichever comes first.

You may be eligible for additional tuition if you have special needs because of difficult pre-migration experiences (for example torture and trauma) or limited schooling.

What will the program cost?

There is no charge for most people who are eligible to study through the program.

Who will teach me?

Local organisations, called service providers, offer AMEP tuition. These service providers employ teachers who are trained in teaching English to speakers of other languages.

Your local service provider will tell you whether you are eligible for the program. They can recommend the best way for you to learn English. They can arrange free childcare for children not yet at school while you attend classes. They can seek approval for you to defer the start of your classes if you need to for family or work reasons.

Your service provider will advise you which course will best fit your needs. They will do this based on your work and family circumstances and your current level of English. They can also help you plan for further study.

Where will I learn?

Service providers offer full- and part-time courses at different times (days, evenings and weekends) and in different venues including schools, colleges and community centres such as churches and mosques.

Service providers offer courses in rural and regional areas as well as in the major cities.

What if I am unable to attend classes?

Distance Learning

The AMEP has a distance learning program called It's Over to You. Your AMEP service provider can give you more information and advice on this course.

It's Over to You includes books and audiovisual materials. You will also have regular contact over the phone with a qualified teacher. You will need to spend at least five hours a week on the course.

It's Over to You concentrates on using language rather than on formal grammar. Exercises and activities include listening to the radio, reading newspapers and advertisements, talking about yourself, asking for information, filling in forms and writing letters.

Home Tutor Scheme

If you are eligible for the AMEP and are unable to attend classes, you may be able to work with a tutor at home.

The tutor can discuss with you the best way for you to learn English, help you practise your English and help you to understand daily life in Australia.

Your AMEP service provider can give you more information and advice on this scheme.
