Skill Stream Outcomes

The Skill Stream of Australia's Migration Programme is specifically designed to target migrants who have skills or outstanding abilities that will contribute to the Australian economy.

In 2005–06, there were 97,340 people granted Skill Stream places, an increase of 19,460 (25.0 per cent) on 2004–05. Of the total Skill Stream, 32.9 per cent (31,990 persons) were onshore applicants.

Skill Stream Visa Categories

The Skill Stream includes the following categories:

Skilled Independent and Skilled Independent Overseas Student – caters for applicants who do not have a family or employer sponsor or who do not wish to be sponsored. Successful applicants must satisfy the basic General Skilled Migration requirements, including skills, age, work experience and English language ability and achieve the required passmark on the General Skilled Migration points test (49,860 visas in 2005–06).

State /Regional Sponsored - includes the permanent State/Territory Nominated Independent (STNI) and Skill Matching Visas as well as the Skilled Independent Regional (SIR) (Provisional) visas (8,020 in 2005–06).

STNI enables State and Territory governments to sponsor Skilled Independent category applicants who are willing to settle in States and Territories where their skills are in demand. State and Territory governments participating in the Scheme establish which skills are in short supply and where skill needs are occurring. Based on this information States and Territories aim to select applicants who have a sound chance of gaining employment in their State or Territory within a short time of their arrival. Grants under STNI have increased by 52.3 per cent from 2,695 in 2004–05 to 4,105 in 2005–06.

The SIR (Provisional) visa is for skilled people who are unable to meet the passmark for a permanent visa and wish to live and work in a regional or low population growth metropolitan area in Australia. Applicants are assessed against the points test and must meet the SIR (Provisional) visa passmark which is slightly lower than for the permanent Skilled Independent visa category. Applicants must also be sponsored by an authorised State or Territory government agency. Once SIR (Provisional) visa holders have complied with the visa's conditions and have lived for at least 2 years, and worked for a minimum of at least 12 months, in a regional or low population growth metropolitan area in Australia, they are eligible to apply for a permanent visa. There were 3,919 SIR (Provisional) visas granted in 2005–06.

Skilled Australian Sponsored and Skilled Australian Sponsored Overseas Student - this category is for skilled people who are sponsored by an eligible family member who is an Australian citizen or permanent resident. The applicant must be able to satisfy the basic requirements of skills, age, work experience and English language ability. Most applicants are assessed against the General Skilled Migration points test, although the passmark is lower than for the Skilled Independent category and applicants receive additional points for sponsorship by an Australian relative. Those applicants whose sponsor lives in a designated area of Australia can meet a lesser work experience requirement, and in some cases a lower standard of English language ability, and are not assessed against the General Skilled Migration points test (19,060 visas in 2005–06).

Employer Sponsored - employers may nominate (or ‘sponsor’) personnel from overseas through the Employer Nomination Scheme (ENS), Regional Sponsored Migration Scheme (RSMS) and Labour Agreements. These visas enable Australian employers to fill skilled permanent vacancies with overseas personnel if they cannot find suitably qualified workers in Australia. 15,230 visas were granted in 2005–06.

Business Skills - encourages successful business people to settle permanently in Australia and develop new business opportunities (net outcome of 5,060 visas in 2005–06).

Distinguished Talent – This category is for distinguished individuals with special or unique talents of benefit to Australia (outcome of 100 visas in 2005–06.)

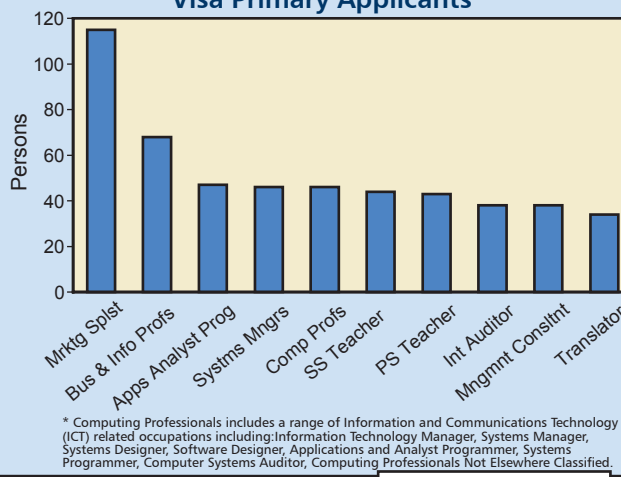

All offshore visa applications for the ENS, RSMS and Labour Agreements (including those from previous applicants) are now lodged directly with the same DIMA Business Centre in Australia that approved their employer’s nomination application to fill a vacancy with an overseas worker. This ensures that visa processing is now streamlined, job advertisement requirements are removed and a clearer pathway to permanent residence for holders of temporary work visas.

Overview of General Skilled Migration

Australia's General Skilled Migration Programme is designed to attract people who have skills in particular occupations that are required in Australia. These occupations are listed on Australia's Skilled Occupations List (SOL).

General Skilled Migration includes the Skilled Independent, Skilled Australian Sponsored, Skilled Designated Area Sponsored (SDAS), STNI, SIR (Provisional) and Skill Matching Visa categories. Visa grants in the Skilled Australian Linked and Skilled Regional Linked categories are also counted towards the General Skilled Migration Programme though these visa categories were closed for new applications on 1 July 1999.

Depending on their circumstances, applicants can apply for a General Skilled Migration visa while they are in Australia or outside Australia. Applicants who can be granted their visa while they are in Australia are referred to as 'onshore' applicants while those who must be outside Australia for their visa to be granted are called 'offshore' applicants.

Through the onshore General Skilled Migration visa categories, overseas students in Australia can apply for and be granted permanent residence following the completion of their studies without the need to leave Australia.

Overseas students applying for one of these categories must apply within six months of completing an Australian qualification (degree, diploma or trade qualification). The qualification must have been obtained after a minimum two years of full time study at an Australian educational institution while the applicant was physically present in Australia. They must also hold a positive skills assessment for an occupation on the Skilled Occupations List that attracts 60 points on the General Skilled Migration points test, unless they have completed an Australian doctorate. Australian doctorate students may hold a positive skills assessment for a 50 point occupation.

Overseas students who have completed their award at a regional campus may also nominate a 50 point occupation if applying for the SIR (Provisional) visa.

To be successful, applicants in all the General Skilled Migration visa categories must meet threshold criteria for skill, work experience, age and English language ability. Applicants with Australian qualifications who apply within six months of course completion are exempt from the recent work experience requirement. All applicants, other than those applying for a Skilled Designated Area Sponsored visa, are then assessed against the General Skilled Migration points test.

General Skilled Migration points test

A points test is used to assess applicants against a range of skill-related factors. The number of points prescribed for each factor reflects their relative importance in the context of an applicant's potential contribution to Australia. The skill, age, English language, work experience and MODL components therefore earn the highest points. Other factors recognised include Australian qualifications, spouse skills, designated investments, work experience obtained in Australia and fluency in a community language other than English.

In 2005–06, more than 38 per cent of successful General Skilled Migration (points-tested) applicants claimed points for an Australian qualification, the large majority of whom also took advantage of the work experience waiver.

A significant increase in demand in both the onshore and offshore General Skilled Migration categories resulted in 76,940 visas being granted in the General Skilled Migration categories in 2005–06. Of these, 64.8 per cent were in the Skilled Independent and Skilled Independent Overseas Student category.

Of successful applicants assessed against the points test, more than 53 per cent were aged less than 30 years, more than 76 per cent scored maximum points for skill and approximately 61 per cent scored maximum points for English language proficiency. Approximately 47 per cent had an occupation that was listed on MODL at the time their visa was granted.

Changes to General Skilled Migration Programme

In recent years, changes to General Skilled Migration selection criteria and the points test have been introduced to ensure that Australia's skilled migrant intake targets identified demands in the Australian labour market, particularly in regional Australia.

The Skilled Independent Regional (Provisional) (SIR) visa is available to potential migrants outside Australia as well as to overseas students in Australia wishing to remain permanently. From 1 July 2005, SIR (Provisional) visa applicants are eligible for 10 "sponsorship" points when sponsored by an authorised State or Territory government agency, further enhancing the attractiveness of this visa.

To further encourage overseas students to consider settling permanently in regional Australia, students can apply for and be granted a SIR (Provisional) visa while in Australia even if they only nominate a 50 point occupation. This concession only applies if they have lived and studied at a campus in regional Australia or a low population growth metropolitan area for a minimum of 2 years prior to applying.

From 1 November 2005, Working Holiday and Occupational Trainee visa holders are eligible to apply for and obtain a SIR (Provisional) visa without leaving Australia. As with other SIR

Employer Sponsored

(Provisional) visa applicants, they must be sponsored by an authorised State or Territory government agency or regional certifying body and meet the current passmark for the visa. This measure significantly expands the pool of people available for sponsorship by State governments and regional authorities under the SIR (Provisional) visa and has the additional advantage of attracting people who already have work experience in Australia. For more information on the SIR (Provisional) visa refer to Chapter 3 – State Specific and Regional Migration.

In 2005–06, 25 new occupations (16 Trades, 5 Computing professions, 3 Engineering professions and Dental specialists) were added to the MODL, taking the total number of occupations on the list to 81. Applicants whose nominated occupation is on the MODL receive priority processing and are awarded additional points under the General Skilled Migration points test. The MODL is reviewed by the Department of Employment and Workplace Relations every six months to better reflect emerging labour needs and further improve targeting.

These new additions reflect a continued focus on the MODL as a way of ensuring the skills component of Australia's Migration Programme delivers migrants with skills that are in demand by Australian employers.

Business and Information Professionals (Computing Professionals) continued as the main occupational grouping (18 per cent) for General Skilled Migration applicants in 2005–06, followed by Science, Building and Engineering Professionals (12 per cent), and Accountants, Auditors and Corporate Treasurers (9 per cent).

Client Service Initiatives relating to General Skilled Migration

From 1 July 2005 people applying for a General Skilled Migration visa that can be granted in Australia as well as for a SIR (Provisional) visa have been able to lodge their applications and supporting documentation over the internet. The 'eVisa' facility has been well received with a significant proportion of visa applications lodged by this means in 2005–06.

The department's new website was launched on 1 July 2006. The General Skilled Migration pages have been completely re-designed to make them client friendly and to assist users to self-select the most appropriate visa option taking into account their personal circumstances. It provides clients with simpler access to the information and services they need through:

- clear information pathways of targeted and relevant content; and
- feedback opportunities for specific client groups.

Employer Nomination Scheme (ENS)

The ENS is an employer-driven scheme that enables Australian employers to recruit highly skilled migrants to fill highly skilled positions that they have been unable to fill through their own training efforts.

Positions must be "highly skilled", full-time and available for a period of at least three years. There is a list of occupations acceptable for this scheme. Positions must also be in accordance with the standards for wages and working conditions provided for in relevant Australian workplace legislation.

ENS consists of two distinct stages, nomination by an employer and the nominee's application for a visa.

A "highly skilled" position is a position that requires the appointment of a "highly skilled" person. That is, a person who has completed at least three years of formal training (or has an equivalent amount of on the job training - usually 5 years), and has also completed three years of relevant post-training work experience.

Visa applicants can satisfy the skill criteria by showing that they have either been working in Australia in the nominated occupation for at least two years including at least the last year with their nominating employer or have had their skills formally assessed as meeting Australian standards plus three years experience, or been nominated for a senior management position with a base salary of more than $165,000.

Minimum salary requirements for the ENS are consistent with those under the Temporary Business (Long Stay) Programme.

The 2005–06 Migration Programme outcome included 9,690 visas granted under the ENS (onshore and offshore), which represents an increase of 15.2 per cent on the outcome for the 2004–05 programme year

Labour Agreements

Labour Agreements are negotiated between the Commonwealth government (represented by the Department of Immigration and Multicultural Affairs and the Department of Employment and Workplace Relations) and an employer or an industry association.

Under a Labour Agreement, a specified number of skilled overseas workers can be recruited within a given period in response to an identified or emerging labour market (or skill) need in the Australian labour market. It can cover both temporary and permanent entry of workers.

Migration criteria under Labour Agreements are generally based on the ENS criteria.

The 2005–06 Migration Programme outcome included 2,080 visas granted under Labour Agreements (onshore and offshore), which represents an increase of 44.0 per cent on the outcome for the 2004–05 programme year.

Successive governments have reaffirmed a commitment to selecting high quality business migrants, in recognition of the benefits they contribute to Australia's increasingly global economy. They bring with them knowledge of overseas markets, business networks, cultural practices and often languages other than English, as well as their specific business skills and experience.

Since 1 March 2003, the majority of Business Skills entrants enter Australia initially on a provisional (temporary) visa for four years and, after satisfactory evidence of a specified level of business or investment activity, may apply for permanent residence. High calibre business migrants may apply for a Business Talent visa to obtain direct permanent residence if they have high level business attributes and are sponsored by a State or Territory government agency.

Lower level visa criteria apply where applicants have attained sponsorship from a State or Territory government, at both the provisional and permanent residence stages. For example, sponsored business owners can attract age and English language concessions.

The net outcome for Business Skills for 2005–06 was 5,060 compared to a net outcome of 4,820 in 2004–05.

Programme integrity continues to improve. Provisional visa holders are required to establish and actively manage a business in Australia before obtaining the benefits of permanent residence. Post-arrival monitoring of Business Skills visa holders resulted in 1,020 visa cancellations in 2005–06 (down from 1,112 in 2004–05), where visa holders had not met the requirements attached to their visa.
