

Application for an APEC Business Travel Card

(for Australian passport holders only)

Important – Please read this information carefully before you complete your application. Once you have completed your application we strongly advise that you keep a copy for your records.

What is an APEC Business Travel Card?

An APEC Business Travel Card provides senior executive level business people with a short-term entry facility to economies that are participating members of the APEC Business Travel Card scheme. For a list of these economies, see www.businessmobility.org/key/abtc.html

The size of a credit card, it:

- contains the holder's passport details;
- lists the economies the holder can enter and stay in (for a period of up to 60 or 90 days, depending on the economy) without separately applying for a visa;
- provides access to fast-track entry and exit lanes at major airports of participating economies; and
- is valid for 3 years, or until the holder's passport expires, whichever is soonest.

Note: As an APEC Business Travel Card is linked to a passport, card holders must always carry their passport when they travel and advise the department if their passport is lost or stolen.

Who should use this application?

Australian passport holders who:

- are senior executive level business people;
- need to travel frequently to APEC economies for trade and investment purposes; and
- have never been convicted or found guilty of a criminal offence.

Note: If you are not an Australian passport holder, but you hold a passport issued by another APEC economy, you may be eligible to apply through your home economy, see www.businessmobility.org/key/abtc.html

Eligibility requirements

To be eligible for the card, Australian applicants must first satisfy the following business-related criteria:

- the applicant must be a senior executive level business person (see below); and
- the applicant must be directly involved in the trade of goods and/or services or the conduct of investment activities when travelling overseas; and
- the business entity (which the applicant represents) must be well-established and well-credentialed in terms of its international trade and investment activities;
- the business entity (which the applicant represents) must demonstrate significant economic benefit within the APEC region from its business activities.

A senior executive level business person is someone at the highest levels of organisational management. To be clear, only those people occupying the 3 highest management tiers of a large business enterprise, or the 2 highest tiers in medium-small enterprises would be eligible for the card (eg. Chairman, Chief Executive Officer, Managing Director, Vice President, Regional Director, Division Head, or the equivalents). These executives must also hold specific authority to commit to trade and investment activities, for example, to negotiate and sign contracts that result in the international purchase and/or selling of goods or services.

Equally as important, the applicant must satisfy the Department of Immigration and Citizenship (the department) that the business entity represented by the applicant is well-established and well-credentialed (ie. can demonstrate a track record for being a reputable and well-known company engaged in trade and investment activity), and can demonstrate that its business has made a significant economic contribution within the APEC region. A significant economic contribution to trade and investment, as a minimum, would be measured in the several millions of dollars per annum (any information provided to the department in support of this will be treated as Commercial-in-Confidence).

Please be aware that the department will conduct a range of business checks and internet-based searches to satisfy itself concerning all of the eligibility criteria and to verify claims against these criteria. In addition, business cards and organisational structure charts (or other documents) are required to verify seniority of position held.

Excluded people

The following people are specifically excluded from being eligible for an APEC Business Travel Card:

- professional athletes;
- news correspondents;
- entertainers, musicians, artists or people engaged in similar occupations;
- dependent spouses and children of senior business people;
- people seeking employment overseas; and
- people intending to engage in paid employment overseas.

Reasons for refusing applications

Applications are commonly refused for the following reasons which reflect the strict business-related criteria outlined above:

- the position occupied is not sufficiently senior;
- the applicant is primarily performing a support role rather than being directly engaged in the selling, sourcing, negotiation and formal agreement to trade and invest. Some examples of support activities are training, legal advice, interpreting, systems development, quality assurance, post-sale support/implementation;
- the applicant's activities relate to the internal administration of a business entity (eg. human resource directors, recruitment director, financial directors, auditors, risk managers, technical managers);

- the application contains insufficient information available for the department to be satisfied in relation to all of the eligibility criteria. (The onus is on the applicant to provide sufficient information at the time of application.);
- the business is new and cannot demonstrate its business credentials or a significant economic benefit within the APEC region at this point in time.

Completing this application

You must answer all of the questions on the application form truthfully and completely. The provision of false or misleading information may result in your application being refused, your APEC Business Travel Card being cancelled or penalties being imposed on you while you are travelling between APEC economies.

Incomplete applications may be returned to you by the department and the processing of your application will be delayed until all information is provided.

Processing your application

The Australian Government assesses your application to determine whether you are eligible for an APEC Business Travel Card under business and character criteria. If you are assessed as eligible, your application will then be distributed to all participating APEC economies.

These economies may vet your application against their immigration requirements to determine whether to clear you for entry and, in some cases, they may issue you a visa. The length of time taken by foreign economies to process your application can vary significantly and is not controlled by the department.

Once all economies have vetted your application, your card will be issued with a list of those economies that have cleared you for entry.

Interim cards

You have the option of applying for an interim card to be issued to you if you require entry to an economy urgently and cannot wait for other participating APEC economies to vet your application.

If you would like to receive an interim card, at no additional charge, please complete Part E of this form.

Interim cards are issued as soon as selected economies have vetted your application.

Note: If you are issued an interim card, the 3 year validity period of your final card will begin from the date your interim card was issued.

Charges

To check current charges, see form 990i Charges, available from the department's website www.immi.gov.au/allforms/990i.htm

Fees may be subject to adjustment at any time.

Fees are non-refundable and payable regardless of an application being approved or declined.

Method of payment

Payment may only be made by credit card and will be charged upon receipt of your application by the department.

Authorised recipient information

An authorised recipient is someone you appoint to receive written communications about your application with the department.

All written communication about your application will be sent to your authorised recipient, unless you indicate that you wish to have health and/or character information sent directly to you.

The department will communicate with the most recently appointed authorised recipient as you may only appoint one authorised recipient at any time for a particular application.
